Byline: Larry Lipson Restaurant CriticTHE FAST GROWING Panera Bakery Cafe national chain has finally cheap apartments in jersey city reached the San Fernando Valley. Located in Studio City, in the onetime Weby's and Vie de France building on busy Ventura Boulevard, Panera, a quasi self service eatery, is already doing a huge weekday lunch business. And it's easy to figure out why. Panera exudes warm bread smells, seems to have this compulsion for fresh ingredients of reasonably good quality and displays its baked goods in a very attractive manner. Basically, it's a moderately priced sandwich, salad and soup place that bakes its own breads, bagels and pastries. It also has a complete line of coffees and teas, hot and cold, to go with its limited but nicely executed fare. I've always said that if a kitchen produces superior soups, the rest of the food is likely to be above average. Panera is a case in point. At my latest visit, a new soup asparagus chicken Florentine (regular bowl $3.95, sourdough bread bowl $4.75) floored me. Pieces of moist chicken and torn spinach leaves floated in the steaming liquid, cheap soccer jersey alluringly green in color and definitively asparagus in flavor intensity. There's a fine onion soup in a bread bowl ($5.25) and a handful of other good soups with a daily listing of at least five. Incidentally, a bowl of any listed soup (or half a salad) can be paired with any half sandwich for $7.25. My favorite sandwich here is the frontega chicken ($6.95) from the hot panini category. Stuffed with smoky white chicken meat, tomato, mozzarella, red onion, chopped basil and a lively chipotle mayonnaise, this tasty, melty mixture nestles between two sizable slices of Panera's crunchy, rosemary onion focaccia. And there's a bag of potato chips on the side. With the soup, it's truly a satisfying meal. Panera, like many of the latest cafes, relies on the new generation of Americans who believe that a sandwich or a salad and a bowl of soup constitutes a worthwhile dinner. You could actually call it a step up for those whose dinner during their younger days often meant jersey boys london cheap tickets a trip to their favorite burger outlet. Panera's 17 regular sandwiches range from peanut butter and jelly on its French bread ($3.95) to a fulfilling "pepperblue" steak offering with lettuce, tomato, red onion, gorgonzola cheese and red pepper sauce on toasted ciabatta. I especially like the new pesto Roma club sandwich ($6.35) spread with pesto aioli and filled with sliced ham, smoked turkey, bacon, two cheeses (cheddar and Swiss), lettuce and roasted tomatoes. In addition to the potato chips, a pickle spear arrives with the latter two. For those into carb numbers, Panera dutifully lists carbohydrate totals for the majority of its salads ($4.95 to $6.95) along with its four low carb, freshly baked breads. There are brownies, cookies, croissants, assorted discount nhl apparel Danish pastries, mini bundt cakes, muffins, scones, strudel and specialty pastries displayed handsomely near the ordering counter..
